SUMMARY OF REPORTABLE INCIDENTS

Purdue, 15-16 October

There were advance indications that a demonstration might be directed against our recruiter upon his arrival on the campus, but it did not occur. Instead, a student "sit-in" developed after interviewing had started, which interrupted the schedule for an hour or more. University officials promised the students a hearing; the demonstrators then withdrew; and the recruiter completed his interviews as scheduled. By remaining he was able to see twenty-six good prospects, including a number of Ph.D. candidates in Economics, Nuclear Physics and Photogrammetry.

Middlebury, 30 October

About thirty students set up a picket line in front of the building housing the Placement Office. They did not interfere with the recruiter and, when campus officials refused them entrance to the Placement Office, they dispersed.

New Hampshire, 13-14 November

A group varying in number from twenty to fifty, requested a debate with the recruiter after his arrival on the campus. When refused they demonstrated intermittently in and around the building where interviews were being conducted. School authorities requested the recruiter to remain, prevented demonstrators from contact with him, and he was able to complete his schedule without further incident.

Notre Dame, 20 November

An estimated seventy persons organized a "sit-in" which prevented access by applicants to the interview room. School officials offered to remove the demonstrators, by force if necessary, but the recruiter declined and left the campus.

Portland State College, 4 December

The recruiter, because of anticipated difficulties, arranged to interview candidates [REDACTED] rather than on the campus.

A group of fifteen to twenty students tried to enter [REDACTED] engage him in debate but were prevented from doing so by U. S. Marshals. They departed after about thirty minutes and did not return.

Indiana University, 12-13 December

After completing three and one-half days of a scheduled five-day visit, the recruiter withdrew in the face of what appeared to be an escalating student demonstration. He left the campus over the objection of university authorities, after arranging for follow-up interviews with the applicants remaining on his schedule.

University of Houston, 25 February

The recruiter was interviewing when a number of students who had been picketing outside entered the building in search of the recruiter. Because of this disruption of his interviewing schedule, and not wishing to be the focal point for further demonstrating, the recruiter, after conferring with the Placement Director and the Vice President of the University for Student Life, left the campus. Arrangements were made by the recruiter to interview the remaining applicants at his hotel.
